

The Trends and Prospects of Digital Convergence of Official Documents and Records in Taiwan

Dr. Chiu-Yen Lin

Director-General, National Archives Administration, National Development Council,
Taiwan, R.O.C.

cylin@archives.gov.tw

ABSTRACT

Digital convergence is a merging process consisting of four traditional independent industries. The entire converging processes are produced by the inter-industry cooperation or joint venture according to the market requirements. Not only does digital convergence happen in the industries, but also in our government. This short lecture will describe the trends and prospects of digital convergence of official documents and records for explaining what happened among departments in Taiwan government. The government reorganization and records process standardization, inter-agency's records catalog convergence, and archives and records convergence will be included.

Keywords: digital convergence; document, records, and archives workflow integration; records process standardization